

About the Authors

Author of the First Edition:

Davorin J. Odrčić is an immigration lawyer based in Milwaukee and principal owner of Odrčić Law Group, LLC. He specializes in removal defense, post-conviction relief for noncitizens, and advising defense attorneys on immigration. Davorin graduated from the University of Notre Dame Law School in 2001. He is a member of the American Immigration Lawyers Association and the Wisconsin Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers. He is also the recipient of the U.S. Department of Justice’s Distinguished Public Service Award for his pro bono legal service for the family members of the victims of the violence at the Sikh Temple in Oak Creek, Wisconsin.

Davorin was the sole author of the first edition of Immigration Consequences of Wisconsin Offenses (2015). This book arose out of Davorin’s work as program chair for the State Bar’s seminar titled Beyond Padilla v. Kentucky: The Immigration Consequences of Criminal Convictions. The seminar received a national award for Outstanding Achievement in Programs by the Association for Continuing Legal Education (ACLEA). Davorin has coauthored several articles for the Wisconsin Lawyer, and is a frequent speaker on immigration issues, including guest-lecturing at the University of Wisconsin Law School and at the Center for Latin American and Caribbean Studies at the University of Wisconsin–Milwaukee, as well as presenting at local, regional, and national conferences hosted by the American Immigration Lawyers Association. He has made several presentations at state judicial conferences in Wisconsin regarding the U.S. Supreme Court’s decision in Padilla v. Kentucky and the immigration consequences of criminal convictions. Davorin encourages defense and immigration attorneys who have questions regarding the immigration consequences of criminal charges to contact him.

Authors of the Second Edition:

Erin M. Barbato is the director of the Immigrant Justice Clinic at the University of Wisconsin Law School. She teaches immigration law and directs a legal clinic for second-year and third-year law students to represent individuals in removal proceedings and with humanitarian-based immigration relief. She has been practicing immigration law for 14 years.

The Wisconsin Law Journal recognized Erin in 2010 as an Up and Coming Lawyer for her dedication to representing immigrants and pro bono service. In 2013, she received the Lee and Lynn Copen Family Justice Award from Women and Children's Horizons for her work with immigrant victims of domestic violence and sexual assault. The Wisconsin Law Journal again recognized Erin's work with immigrants by honoring her as a Woman in the Law in 2014. She has also been a member of the Wisconsin Pro Bono Honor Society since 2013.

Ben M. Crouse is a partner at Chadwick and Crouse, practicing immigration law in Milwaukee, Wisconsin. He specializes in removal defense, asylum, and family immigration law. He also serves as a clinical instructor with the University of Wisconsin Law School's Immigrant Justice Clinic.

Before private practice Ben clerked with the Immigration Courts in Chicago and Houston. In 2013, the Wisconsin Law Journal recognized Ben as an Up and Coming Lawyer for his work in Wisconsin publicizing the then-new Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals (DACA) program. Ben has presented at state and national conferences regarding the consequences of criminal convictions, postconviction relief, bonds, and plea agreements and on other topics.

Angela B. O'Brien is an attorney at Quarles & Brady LLP in Madison, Wisconsin. Before law school, she worked as a caseworker for Diocesan Migrant and Refugee Services, Inc., in El Paso, Texas, helping to defend noncitizens who were facing deportation. During law school, she was a clinical law student in the Immigrant Justice Clinic and appeared before the Chicago Immigration Court to defend asylum seekers and noncitizens seeking other forms of relief. In 2018 and 2019, she travelled to the South Texas Family Residential Center in Dilley, Texas, where she prepared detained mothers and their children for their credible-fear interviews with asylum officers. Angela has also volunteered extensively over the past three years with the Community Immigration Law Center in Madison, Wisconsin, first as an intake volunteer and then as an attorney.

Aissa I. Olivarez is the managing attorney at the Community Immigration Law Center, a nonprofit law firm in Madison, Wisconsin, serving primarily individuals detained by the Department of Homeland Security. She received her undergraduate degree in government from the University of Texas at Austin and her law degree from the University of Wisconsin-Madison. After graduation, Attorney Olivarez returned to the region in Texas where she was raised, the Rio Grande Valley, to represent children detained and at risk of deportation along the U.S.-Mexico border. She is a member of the American Immigration Lawyers Association and the State Bar of Wisconsin.

Acknowledgments

Erin M. Barbato wishes to acknowledge the assistance of Margaret Morris and Elizabeth Euler, third-year students at the University of Wisconsin Law School, in the preparation of chapters 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 17, and 18.

Ben M. Crouse is “humbled to work with his brilliant coauthors Erin and Aissa and law students Liz and Maggie.”

The authors of the second edition “are deeply indebted to Davorin Odrčić for the incredible work he put into the first edition of this publication and grateful for his continued leadership in this area of the law.”

How to Cite This Book

Cite this book in briefs and legal memoranda as:

Davorin J. Odrčić et al., Immigration Consequences of Wisconsin Criminal Offenses (2d ed. 2021).

[See The Bluebook: A Uniform System of Citation Rs. 15, B15.1 (Columbia L. Rev. Ass'n et al. eds., 21st ed. 2020).]

After the first full citation, you may cite this book as:

Immigration Consequences of Wisconsin Criminal Offenses, supra, § ____.

[See The Bluebook: A Uniform System of Citation Rs. 4.2(a), 15.10, B15.2 (Columbia L. Rev. Ass'n et al. eds., 21st ed. 2020).]